

'Hospice'

There are non-profit and there are for profit hospice programs. The Elizabeth Hospice Program, San Diego Hospice, Tri-City Hospice, the Sharp Hospice, and Hospice of the North Coast, are all not-for-profit programs.

Because of the emotional stress that occurs when someone dies, it is a good idea to do this research now, when pressure is not upon you and your family.

We hope it is a long time before you or those close to you have a need for hospice care. Yet you can take comfort in knowing there are a number of outstanding hospice organizations out there, waiting to be of service to you.

Sources: Our thanks go out to the Public Affairs Officers and/or corporate officers for the hospice organizations - all of whom do a tremendous job for their organization: Lisa Marcolongo and Christina Cadruvi for The Elizabeth Hospice, Melissa DelaCalzada, San Diego Hospice and Palliative Care; Suzi Johnson, VP, Bruce Hartman and Janine Lortscher, Sharp Hospice; Diane Nockey, Hospice of the North Coast; and Aaron Byzak, Tri-City Hospice Care. And, of course, to the patients and their families.

Attention Seniors!

It happens that we have a need for drivers to deliver copies of The Paper to area businesses and mobile home parks (particularly in Vista, Carlsbad and Oceanside). Folks selected must have their own vehicles, a valid California drivers license and be able to work about a day and a half a week.

If you fit that description, give us a call. And, no, you don't have to be a senior citizen. But we sure do like seniors.

We have over 500 businesses that carry copies of The Paper for our readers to pick up free and to read. We need you to get them out to our businesses. You'll make good money for just a couple days work.

Call us. We'll talk. Maybe have a cup of tea.
