Desalination Plant in Carlsbad Challenged

Claiming the California Coastal Commission illegally granted a permit to the proposed $300 million desalination plant in Carlsbad, two environmental groups filed suit Monday seeking to overturn the granting of the permit.

The nonprofit Surfrider Foundation and the Planning and Conservation League joined forces in filing the lawsuit.

Poseidon Resources, Inc., the company that has proposed and studied the desalination plant proposal for years, said its officials continue to work with California Coastal Commission officials to address concerns and questions.

The plaintiffs argue that the desalination plant would harm marine life and Agua Hedionda

Lagoon, where the plant would be located, and that Poseidon has not offered sufficient proof to establish that no harm would occur.

Poseidon officials claim that over eight years of research and study has shown that no harm would come to the marine habitat. Countless environmental studies have been conducted along these lines, they say. Officials say the suit is without merit.

Coastal Commission officials say Poseidon has to provide detailed plans to satisfy the questions of commissioners, probably within six months, before any building permit can be issued.

At least one water agency official who had contracted to purchase water from Poseidon expressed frustration. "We've had eight years of studies; we've explored the environmental issues, we've come up with plans to mitigate any problems, and, at the last minute, complained that the

Tons of Dirt Moved by NCTD

In response to problems created by recent rains and subsequent flooding of businesses located close to the new Sprinter railroad tracks, NCTD brought in heavy earth-moving equipment last weekend. The equipment managed to move tons of soil from the Loma Alta creek bed. The southern bank of the creek was excavated on Saturday and Sunday once emergency clearing permits were secured from the Army Corps of Engineers.

Tom Kelleher, chief spokesman for NCTD, said that 1400 cubic yards of dirt were moved.

Area businesses complained that when NCTD installed the tracks five feet higher than original surface area, a narrowing of the creek channel ensued, and when the heavy rains came, it had nowhere to go but over its banks. Presumably, now that the creekbed has been deepened, the water will flow more freely and not cause flooding condition. Time will tell.
